JONES FOUR UP ON CANADIAN "CHAMP" AT END OF 9 HOLES

Bobby Meets Medalist C. Ross
Somerville In Match

pected to Crowd the Links

Bobby Jones was four up on Ross Somerville, Canadian champion at the end of the first 9 holes in the match at the Merion Cricket Club today.

By Davis J. Walsh

I. N. S. Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—So far as a certain Mr. Jones is concerned, the national amateur golf championship virtually will be decided at Merion Cricket Club today.

If he gets by those two eighteen hole matches that are on the program for the eight hours about to ensue, then he will be pointed downhill with all four wheels goony with grease and a fresh wind blowing against his broad back.

Moreover, a number of men, young and old, who have been waiting to cash those so-called 50 to 1 wagers reported to have been made on his winning the four major golf championships of the year, will be dancing in the streets and thumping their grannies on the back, if any.

This Mr. Jones must win two of those hotballed matches today to get into the thirty-six hole, catch-as-catch-can, hitwhere you please jousts where he is in a class by himself and where he has sustained but one defeat in the last six years. Once he coasts into the double round business, which begins on Thursday, there won't be any more to it, or, to say the least, not much.

Mr. Jones never has had a fancy for this eighteen-hole business. It isn't the sort of thing the better golfers relish. Too many accidents can happen in that short time. Witness the pain that came into his life last year when young Johnny Goodman of Omaha thrust his sandy skull up over the shoulders of his mates and laid Mr. Jones low in the very first round of play.

The Atlantan isn't meeting any pushover in his first round today. Mr.
C. Ross Somerville of Canada never would be picked as an opponent for Primo Carnera if he were a boxer fighting man. He has been the Canadian amateur champion at least three times and he has beaten some pretty fancy golfers, American and otherwise, in winning these championships. Also, he has had plenty of experience over the eighteen hole course, since they fancy that sort of thing in Canada.

If he wins over Somerville, which isn't the surest thing in the world, he will have to meet either another Canadian, F. E. Hoblitzell, or the veteran Ellis Knowles, both likewise skilled at the eighteen hole game. Your correspondent isn't wholly familiar with the virtues of Mr. Hoblitzell, but he does know that Mr. Knowles, a semifinalist in this amateur championship 26 years ago, has had much eighteen hole experience around New York and is a serious fighter who's hard to shake under any circumstances.

Thus Mr. Jones faces his problem.
If he fails to get through today, his dream of having won the four major titles in one year, quite naturally will have been destroyed. If he does get by these matches, stopping him will be next to an impossibility. Mr. Jones can spot anyone in the world three or four holes over a thirty-six hole match
and shellack them, but he can't spot
very many golfers that many holes over eighteen and still flag them before the end is reached. Nor can any one else, for that matter.

Knights of Columbus Card Party A Success

The card party given last evening by the Knights of the Columbus in their home at Radcliffe and Mulberry streets was largely attended and proved a splendid success both financially and socially.

The games of "500" and pinochle
were played and seven tables of "500"
and ten of pinochle players were arranged.

The prizes were useful and attractive and in the game of "500" the fortunate contestants and their scores were:

Mrs. Catharine A. Lynn, 4420; N. J.
McGinley, 3920; Mrs. Neal Mulligan, 3430; Miss M. Mulligan, 3350; Mrs. C.
Harkins, 3200; Miss Eleanor Clements, 3060; Miss Marie E. McGee, 6380; 3030; Mrs. Warren Armstrong, 3020;
Mrs. B. Dowis, 2830.

The prize winning competitors and their scores in pinochle were:

Mrs. Carl Winch, 844; Carl F.
Winch, 801; Florence Gallagher, 778;
M. Darrah, 751; A. Angelo, 746;
Francis McGee, 743; Miss Julia Mc-Fadden, 734; Mrs. A. Gosline, 729;
Mrs. Eva Beaton, 726; Mrs. Anna
Barnfield, 723; Mrs. B. F. McGee, 683.

Following the card playing, refreshments of cake, sandwiches and soft drinks were served.

The committee in charge: John Ennis, John Mulligan, Warren Armstrong, Dennis Roche and Frank Hurley, wish to thank everybody who attended the party, helping to make it
the success that it was.

PENROSE LAUDED AS STATUE IS UNVEILED

Statesmen

WAS NATIONAL FIGURE

HARRISBURG, Sept. 24.—Republican stalwarts of a past era in the politics of the State yesterday joined with party chieftains of the present in paying tribute to the memory of the late Boies Penrose, for twenty-five years United States Senator from Pennsylvania.

From every county of the Commonwealth men who served under the banners of Penrose in many memorable campaigns came to Harrisburg to witness the unveiling of a bronze statue
in Capitol Park and hear Governor Fisher, Senator Joseph R. Grundy and President Judge Charles L. Brown, of the Philadelphia Municipal Court, ex-
-toll Penrose, not only as party leader, but as a shaper of legislation in the State and Nation.

The bronze figure, representing the Senator in the prime of his life, stands on the southwest corner of Capitol
Park. It was unveiled by Mrs. Spencer Penrose, of Colorado, sister-in-law of the statesman.

In the throng that witnessed the unveiling was a group of men who, as members of the Legislature, voted to send Penrose to the United States Senate in 1897, 1903 and 1909. That was the period before the direct primary.

In addition to these old-time lawmakers, there were on hand men who served in the cabinets of Governors during the days when Penrose was the undisputed leader in Pennsylvania Republicanism.

From Philadelphia came a delegation of 600 headed by Mayor Mackey.
They arrived at Harrisburg on a special train.

Senator Grundy, who now occupies the seat so long filled by Penrose, presided over the unveiling ceremonies.
Judge Brown, a member of the Penrose Memorial Committee, which was appointed in accordance with an act of the Assembly, formally turned the statue over to the custody of the Commonwealth.

Governor Fisher accepted the trust and in turn placed it in the hands of the Department of Properties and Supplies as represented by Secretary
Benson E. Taylor.

The lapse of nearly ten years since the death of Senator Penrose found his eulogizers stressing not so much of his achievements in the realm of practical politics, but his work as a lawmaker and the framer of policies for the people at Harrisburg and at Washington.

His firm grasp of the fundamentals of government, gained from a long experience in the legislative halls of his State and at the National Capitol, made him stand out over most of his contemporaries, it was asserted.

Senator Grundy, long an intimate associate of Penrose, saw in him the embodiment of protection and a zeal for fostering the industries of the country for the benefit of capital and labor alike.

Going into the Senate with the advent of the McKinley administration, Senator Grundy pointed out, Penrose played a large part in bringing about enactment of the Dingley Tariff act,
and this service "made him invaluable
to Pennsylvania and an acknowledged authority with vast power and influence in the Senate."

Penrose was a firm believer in party government, Senator Grundy declared.
"He hated the hypocrite, despised the opportunist and loathed the demagogue."

During his service in the Senate,

Sixteen Members of Doylestown Scout Troop 4 Visit Places of Interest in Philadelphia—Fire Destroys Feed House of Harper Atkinson at Lehaska—Mrs. John C. Swartley of Doylestown Quite Seriously Injured in Auto Crash—Veteran of German Army Hangs Self to Tree.

Sixteen members of Troop 4 of the Boys Scouts, of Doylestown, were taken on a trip to visit several places of interest in Philadelphia and vicinity.

In the party were: Assistant Scoutmaster Beshel, Committeemen Crean
and Louis Fonash, and the following Scouts—John Welsh, James Fulham, William Nels, Jr., Frank Welsh, Walter Beck, George Beck, Harold Dunstan, John Dunstan, Charles Happ, P.
Woodcock, Richard Whitley, Paul Pe-trilli, Francis Harton, John Crean and Louis Bregan.

The trip was made in a bus. On reaching Philadelphia the party was first taken to see Admiral Byrd's ship,
"City of New York," which is visiting different ports where visitors are permitted to see through it in an effort to raise funds to pay off the deficit of the Byrd polar trip.

From the ship the scouts were taken to Independence Hall, and from there to the Navy Yard, where they had a special guide. They were taken through several destroyers and the U. S. S. Pennsylvania. After that the boys were taken to the Navy air base.

Earlier, the same troop took a trip
up the Delaware in an effort to maintain interest during the summer months when there were no meetings.

Fire of an undetermined origin destroyed the feed house belonging to Harper Atkinson at the station here.
Members of the Atkinson family were unaware of the fire until called by a neighbor, Mr. Truscott, whose son saw the reflection of the flames in his bedroom. Mr. Truscott then hastened to the Atkinson home, informing members of the fire.

The fire had made such headway
that it was impossible for the firemen
from the Wycombe company to check it, and as a result the building and its contents were destroyed.

Mr. Atkinson said this morning that he had about $1,000 worth of feed and $500 worth of cement and fertilizer stored in the building. Machinery in the lower part of the building was damaged.

Some of those in the cast and the characters they will portray are:

FAKE REPORT

The finding of a gunner's coat in an automobile in Rocky Woods, this morning, led to a rumor that a death car had been found. The mystery was cleared up when the owner of the auto was identified as a nearby farmer who used the car to go hunting.

Stewart Rhodes, of Hayes street, returned to State College, where he will resume his studies, after spending the summer months with his father, Max Slatoff.

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Mount, of Garden street, gave a birthday party in honor of their son Eugene's sixth birthday anniversary.

The party was held last evening
from 7 to 9 o'clock, and the children had a wonderful time playing games.

Prizes were awarded, those receiving them being Russell Hellings, Howard Hellings, Albert Gross, Jr., and Mary Elmer.

During the evening the guests were invited to the dining room where refreshments were served. The living and dining rooms were decorated with green and white crepe paper and a large birthday cake with six green candles formed the centerpiece on the table. Each child received as a favor a lollipop dressed as a doll.

Those who enjoyed this delightful party were: Gladys Cochran, Margaret Allen, Agnes Gross, Mary and Alice
Elmer, Eileen McGerr, Mary Luci,
Jane Argust, Francis Gross, Harvey
Cochran, Albert Gross, Jr., Jack
Gross, Howard and Russell Hellings,
Dominic Luci, Ronald and Marvin Argust, Eugene McCole, Henry Elmer, Jr.

The older folks attending the party were: Mrs. Henry Elmer, Mrs. Thomas Argust, Mrs. Mount and daughters Viola and Stella, Miss Irene Hellings, and Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Mount.

Eugene received many pretty birthday gifts, among them a large bouquet
of flowers from his grandmother.

SOME GET BUSINESS

An analysis of published reports of corporation earnings for the first six months of 1930 throw some interesting light on business conditions and the manner in which various lines of industry are weathering the depression.

Five groups showed increased profits over the corresponding period of 1929 in spite of the business retrenchment. These groups with their percentages of increase in parentheses are: Amusement companies (68.39), drugs (7.38), restaurant chains (4.65), printers and publishers (2.64), and beverages and confections (1.94).

All six companies studied in the amusement field did better the first six months this year than in 1929. Of the six restaurant chains studied three reported larger profits and three lower profits. Nine drug companies were studied, six showing profit reductions and three gains.

The inference from this survey is that in times of depression and unemployment people have more time for the theater, to "doctor up" and "paint up" at the drug store, to read to eat and to drink.

But of far more significance is the fact, disclosed by the analysis, that in the 28 groups studied all but one had at least one member able to show a better profit in 1930 than in 1929. What else does that prove if it is not that the business is there for those who go after it? Where one company can do it, whose fault is it that others fail?

KING OF SPORTS

Baseball is still the great American sport. Any doubt of that was removed when the placing of world series tickets on sale the other day revealed a demand for them in excess of that of last year before the securities crash. But why?

No game yet developed is so thrilling or so charged with the elements of passion and suspense as major league ball. Football and polo are hard games, in which players win distinction only by extraordinary stamina, skill and fortitude. But baseball is more a matter of hair-trigger technique and the perfect combination of team-work and individual play.

But baseball doesn't owe its place in the sun to itself alone. An army of enthusiastic sports editors and other writing men, some thousands of miles of telegraph wires, unlimited space on the front pages and scoreboards everywhere have exalted, glorified and popularized the game.

Other sports may win new following and sand-lot baseball may vanish from the picture of amateur athletics, but big league baseball will remain the major sport of the nation as long as the sporting pages treat it as such.

"It popped into my head," said Aggy. "Lady Haviland was so fearfully condescending like, and so feared that you would look up Lord Archibald for a loan. So I just minded myself that the Sandisons were one of the oldest baronetcies in the kingdom and the Havilands but bare two hundred years! So I wasn't letting her try to patronize Sir Steenie's widow or his son. I told her exactly what popped into my head. Glad am I that I did, for it kept burling round and round there till it turned into as good a plan as any I could think of. So if you you nothing pressing to do the night, Sir Geordie—"

He looked at her and smiled. "You go too fast for me, Aggy. I have to look for a place to sleep."

"Then that's settled," Lady Sandison declared, but the look she gave him implored him not to refuse her, "if you'll remember that I'm your stepmother and take a shakedown here at my flat. You're that tall and I'm such a shorty that I think you'll have to take the bedroom, and I'll take the sitting room couch."

To refuse, with those blue eyes, generally so hard, fixed anxiously on him was beyond Sir George. He tried to. He protested, but finally found himself saying: "I'll accept your hospitality gladly, Lady Sandison."

"Aggy."

"Aggy, but I'm to have the couch."

Lady Sandison for the first time that evening actually smiled. "I doubt it," she said. "I doubt you can double up that small, but we'll leave that until the time comes. At present, while the lass is clearing, we'll have the coffee and cigarettes in the sitting room, and I'll tell you this America plan."

"Yes," agreed Sir George, but he set his handsome jaw. Aggy was quite all right and a splendid manager. She had always been that, but she was not going to manage him into going to America.

Aggy saw the set jaw and began calmly: "You'll have mind when you were a wee bit laddie, I was used to tell you stories of my brother, Robert, in America?"

"What is his way?"

"Some kind of contracting business. Putting up weirs and grand public buildings, bridges and they awful skyscrapers that crowd streets over there."

Sir George nodded to signify his comprehension.

"He's by way of being something awful well off."

Sir George's eyes opened.

Aggy nodded solemnly. "Him and me's been at odds for many a long year on account of a real implacable letter he sent me some time before I married your father. He doesn't know I'm married. I refused to go out to America and be pampered the way he said he would pamper me. Rob let fly some awful words about 'd-n obstinate females,' so I just didn't answer his letter. When he sent some lawyer bodies after me I just told them to take his money and his messages back to him. I would go my own gait. You see," she added, as Sir George looked at her inquisitively, "I was badly needed at Sandisbrae then. It would have been demoralized, but for me. Your father was rarely himself, and things were not as they had been in my lady's time. You were away in France."

Sir George nodded. He did not want to remember those times.

"I couldn't see my way to leaving the place, especially as your father was making up to Jock's lass, as I told you. And she with little sense in her wee, putty head! So I judged that it would be better for you if I stayed and let your father compromise himself with me. At least that's the way I let him think," she said, with a nod at Sir George.

"It sounds quite reasonable," said Sir George, and there was silence again as the maid took the fish plates and brought in the meat course.

It was roast beef with potatoes and cabbage but it was the food of the gods to hungry Sir George, who fed upon it.

Lady Sandison, not having his appetite, ate a little more slowly and between bites studied her stepson.

"Seven and six is all you have?"

Sir George, his mouth full, nodded. "Where'll you sleep?" asked the practical Aggy.

"I haven't decided yet," Sir George looked at her with a smile. "But at that I'm not 'daunted' as you used to say, Aggy. I'll walk to Haviland's club and ask—"

"He's off and away," interrupted Lady Sandison. "His mother told me that, over the telephone, this very day. He was out at Mont Denys for the weekend. I doubt she sent him there when she heard you were coming back."

Sir George looked somewhat discomposed.

"Why did you?"

"I didn't," said Lady Sandison, flushing a little. She called me. It seems she'd heard that I was here and you were expected, and she telephoned me and asked when you were coming."

"She has heard of the collapse of the oil business, I suppose?"

"I expect. She seemed to know everything but the date of your arrival, and I told her that myself and said that if Lord Archibald wanted to see you he'd just have to wait, as you had things concerning the estate to settle before you were off to America."

Sir George leaned back in his chair and surveyed this extraordinary woman.

"America! Why on earth should I go to America? Where did you get that idea?"

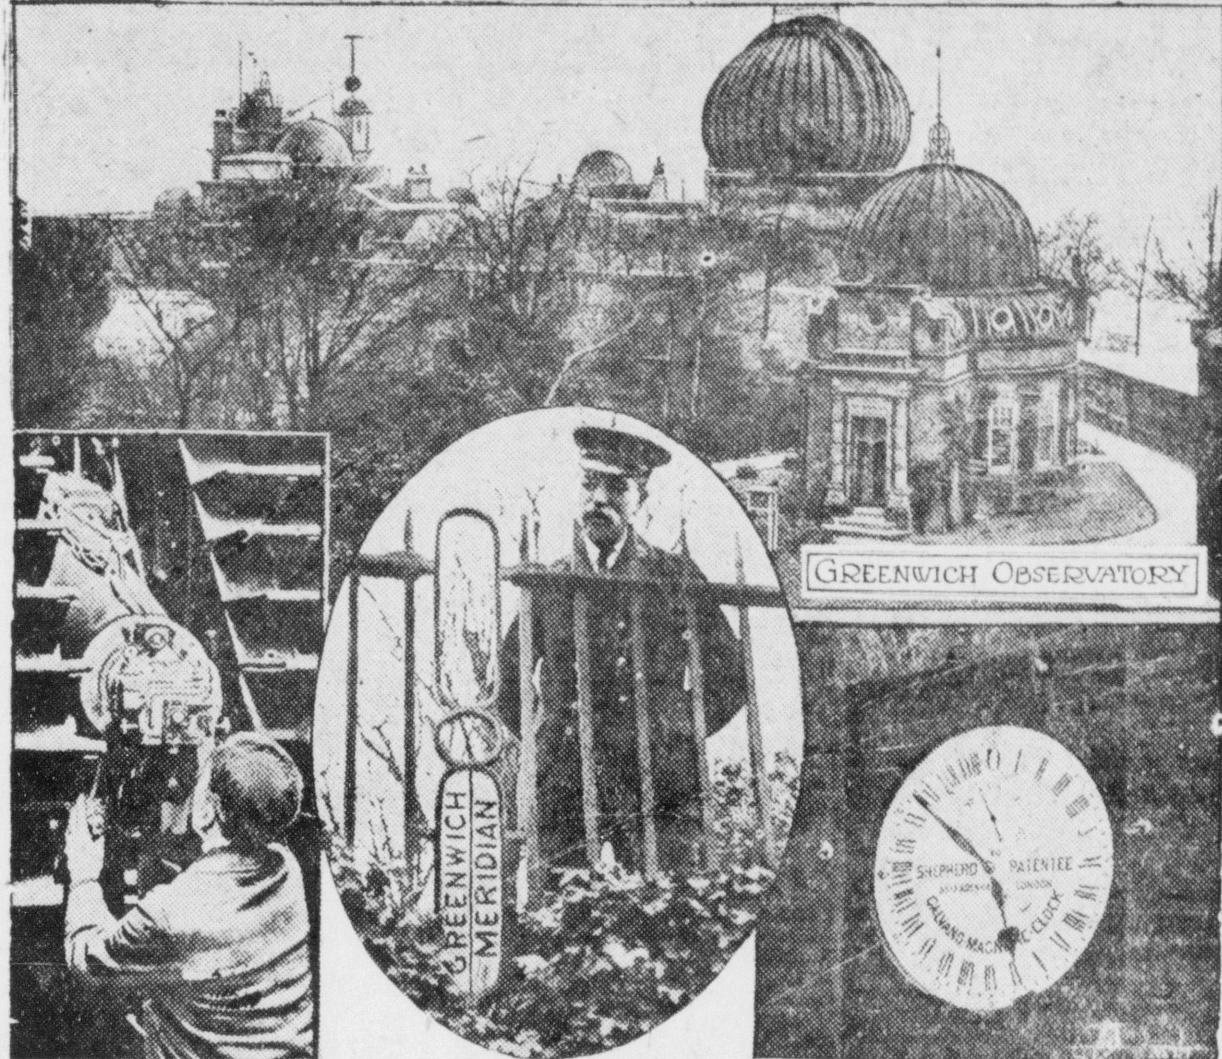

"Aggy," he began, after a moment's hesitation.

Greenwich, Time Factory for World, Celebrates Its 250th Anniversary

English Observatory, Chosen by Scientists in 1884 as Longitude 0 on Mythical Line, Takes Its Work Seriously

TRANSIT CIRCLE

THE GREENWICH MERIDIAN

GALVANO-MAGNETIC CLOCK IN

LONDON, Eng., Sept. 24.—Telling the time to the world. That is the job of the famous observatory at Greenwich, England, where "Greenwich time" has become a horological trade mark. And Greenwich takes its duties very seriously since to scientists it is the prime meridian, thereby being better known as Longitude 0.

Modern miracles of science are casually accepted today, but there is still a tremendous amount of curiosity about the difference in time in various parts of the world. There is a very definite reason why the local time of New York City is four hours and fifty-six minutes slower than what is known as Greenwich Mean Time. And Mean Time is reckoned by the mean sun which is arrived at on a basis of a perfect equality in the duration of days.

That mysterious imaginary line which extends over the earth's surface between the North and South poles has ever been a symbol of fascination to people who want to know how it has been arrived at and who wonder just where the earth's surface begins and ends. This was decided at the International Meridian Congress in 1884 when scientists from all over the world decided that the meridian of Greenwich, should be taken as the prime meridian, and that place therefore became Longitude 0. Using this line as a starting point, twenty-four standard meridians differing from it by fifteen degrees of longitude, east and west, were marked off on the globe, and Longitude 0 or Greenwich became the time factory for the world.

A glance at the map will reveal that New York City is seventy-four degrees west and on the basis of fifteen degrees to an hour, the metropolis of the western hemisphere is almost five hours slower than Greenwich.

Recently the Royal Observatory at Greenwich commemorated the completion of 250 years of service with the old observatory, built in 1672, still in use. This is now known as Flamsteed

This mythical line has a material symbol in the form of a fragment of spider webbing an inch in length. By the passing of the stars across this to prevent handling but to insure the well-nigh invisible thread in Greenwich mean time computed. Visitors to the observatory are always anxious to gaze through the telescope in order to be in the novel position of being half in the eastern and half in the western hemispheres.

Another interesting exhibit is the galvanomagnetic clock which is placed at the entrance of the observatory and records the time of day in Longitude 0. All twenty-four hours are designated. And all visitors find their way to the tablet which marks the exact habitat of Longitude 0. The wonderful instruments used by the astronomers are kept under sealed cases not only apartments. Cornwells, the local music teacher, is confined to her bed with a slight illness.

Mrs. S. B. McLees and daughter, Elizabeth, were visitors at Lawrenceville, N. J., on Saturday where the Mershon reunion was held.

The gas lines are going through Cornwells in rapid style and before long the residents will enjoy the convenience of a city home.

Rev. and Mrs. Vorhees of the Eddington Presbyterian Church were visitors at the home of Mrs. Davidson, of Philadelphia, on Monday.

Mrs. Harry Brown, of Finley Road

rounded churches of the Township supported the celebration and one of the largest crowds in years was massed together in the little old church by the roadside.

Jack Page, of Cornwells, was held up recently on Street Road. The bandits put Mr. Page's machine out of commission and relieved him of five dollars in cash and a watch.

A football game will get under way on the Eddington Field this coming Sunday. The visiting team is unknown. The home team will be known as the Bristol A. A. This team is comprised of a number of old Eddington players, such as "Porky" Earl and Frank Early and various other stars of the former local group.

Fate Unkind to Most Artist-Model Unions

Statistics Prove the Show Girls Go in Heavily for Modeling—End in Marriage but Fail in Combination of Model and Wife

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Quite a lot of romances lately have had their inception in an artist's studio. And quite a lot of them, too, have ended there. Many a story has been written around the theme of the lovely artists' model and the famous artist. The plot generally describes the romances, the marriage and then the necessity of the artist to find another model, with the result that instead of being a model union, it becomes a muddled one.

In real life, too, many famous models have married famous artists, men who have immortalized their beauty, and so brought them renown. Many of these marriages have been happy, but a great many of them have also gone on the rocks.

model to compare to her. Just nine months later came the news of his marriage to another model, Helene Haskin.

The second wife of Ben Ali Haggan, millionaire, renowned artist and decorator for Ziegfeld's Folies, was Bonnie Glass, a dancer, who had modeled for the debonair Haggan. After a few years of marriage they tried a trial separation that became a permanent one in Mexico, when Bonnie received a huge settlement.

Haggan took as his third wife lovely blonde Mary Corday, a little American art student, whom he had met in Florence, and whose features he had also immortalized on canvas. The two are inseparable companions, and very happy, according to society gossip.

Frances Starr, the actress, was one of the favorite models of Haskell Coffin, the renowned portrait painter. They were married in 1920, Coffin having been left a widower with three sons. The actress and her painter husband were radiantly happy for a time, but suddenly rumors of incompatibility and then separation were rife. Last May, Miss Starr was awarded a divorce at Reno, having charged non-support. The artist, penniless and desperate, was taken from his home to a hospital, suffering from a nervous depression, but is now restored to health. He says that he has found salvation in religion and believes that his wife will ultimately return to him.

But there is a pleasanter side to the story of artists and their "model" wives. James Montgomery Flagg, the famous illustrator married Dorothy Fitch, one of his best models. They are very happy, and Dorothy Fitch is still his favorite model, being used for many of his magazine story illustrations as well as magazine covers. And there's Howard Chandler Christy and his beautiful wife, Nancy. She, too, was his model before their marriage and she still is. They share common interests and, incidentally, Mrs. Christy is her husband's business manager, as well as critic and friend.

Other artists who married beauties and are still happily married include John La Gatta and Clark Agnew. Helen Clive, one of Ziegfeld's prize blooms from his bouquet of beauty, is married to the famous artist, Henry Clive, and it is she who poses for his colorful magazine covers. They are one of the art world's happiest couples.

"My boy, 7, would not eat. I gave him Vinol and the way he eats and plays now makes me happy. He gained 15 pounds."—J. F. Andres.

Vinol supplies the body important mineral elements of iron, calcium with cod liver peptone. This is just what thin, nervous children or adults need, and the QUICK results are surprising. The very FIRST bottle often adds several pounds weight. Vinol tastes delicious!—Harry H. Headley, druggist.—(Adv.)

Penrose Lauded As Statue Is Unveiled

(Continued from Page 1) Grundy continued, Penrose witnessed the country adopt the Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution providing for the income tax, "one effect of which was to saddle upon the people of the progressive and productive Commonwealths a large part of the burden supporting the backward States; the Seventeenth Amendment, providing for the direct election of United States Senators, the consequences of which are so well known as to require no comment; the Eighteenth Amendment, which was to dry up the country, and the Nineteenth Amendment, creating woman suffrage."

"If there is one thought above others that the memory of Boies Penrose suggests to me," Grundy concluded, "it is that progress and prosperity are dependent upon sound governmental policy; that sound governmental policy can only be made effective through political integrity; that political integrity, in the larger sense, only can be achieved and maintained out of party solidarity, and that party solidarity is impossible without capable and courageous leadership devoid of personal ambition, with an eye single to the good of the Nation as a whole. This was the chart and compass of the man in whose honor we gather here today."

Some intimate details in the career of Senator Penrose, described as a "master of the science of government—statesman," were related by Judge Brown in his address turning the statue over to the Commonwealth.

Judge Brown was intimately associated with the Senator for many years, and, from a political standpoint, probably was closer to him than any other man in Pennsylvania.

It was the leadership of such men as the Camerons, Quay and Penrose that was responsible for wresting Pennsylvania from the hands of the Democrats and keeping it safely in Republican control, the Philadelphia jurist related.

Penrose was singularly successful in public life, Judge Brown stated, because he kept himself free from entangling alliances with concerns doing business with the State or the nation.

"A man prominent in party government," said Judge Brown, "can vision and accomplish for the public welfare a real service only when he stands free from alignment with any form of business with which the Commonwealth has to deal."

He told how Penrose withdrew from a law firm where he had a lucrative practice and continued:

"Party government, or its candidates is defeated when men, securing controlling influence in its management, direct its purposes to their financial gain."

Penrose's service to the nation as chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads and later as head of the all-important Finance Committee, were set forth in detail by Judge Brown.

While a strict party man, Judge Brown stated, Penrose never permitted partisanship to interfere with his duty to the country. As an evidence of this he points to the whole-hearted support given by the Senator to President Wilson, a Democrat, during the trying days of the war period.

Although in ill-health when President Harding came into office and the era of reconstruction got under way, Senator Penrose, said Judge Brown, applied himself with vigor to the task of directing the Finance Committee.

"Here again Senator Penrose evidenced his keen knowledge of men," Judge Brown remarked. "I asked him, prior to President Harding's assuming office, if Mr. Mellon would be the Secretary of the Treasury. 'Yes,' the Senator stated, 'he is now arranging his business affairs, retiring from everything that would touch Government finance, prior to his acceptance. It will be a personal sacrifice, but a public gain, for most things to which that man puts his hand turn to gold.'

Judge Brown declared that Senator Penrose, more than any other person was responsible for bringing about the nomination of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt for Vice-President in the Philadelphia convention of 1900, Roosevelt himself was opposed to the move, and so was Mark Hanna. The late Senator Platt wanted to have county; General Edward Martin, Roosevelt nominated to put him on the State Treasurer and chairman of the Republican State Committee, and A. Boyd Hamilton, Secretary of the Senate; Julian Millard, of Harrisburg; Samuel Murray, of Philadelphia, sculptor who fashioned the Penrose Memorial; Senator David A. Reed; General Edward C. Shannon, nominee for Lieutenant Governor; Daniel J. Sherrin, of Philadelphia; Benson E. Taylor, Secretary of Property and Supplies; and Frank J. Gorman.

BRISTOL A. A. TEAM TO USE EDDINGTON FIELD

After disbanding for one season the Bristol A. A. football team has again been organized and will play all its home games on the Eddington football field. The manager of the eleven is Edward McDevitt, while "Gunner" Corrigan is coaching the boys.

The team has been practicing for the past three weeks and will inaugurate its 1930 season on Sunday with the Ivy Collegians as its opponents. The Bristol A. A. team is composed of the following players: Ends, Gene Beary, Lieutenant Commander J. J. Clark, of Washington; Philip H. Dwyer, Republican nominee for Secretary of Internal Affairs; Judge George W. Maxey, nominee for the Supreme Court; Judge James B. Drew and centers, Larry David and John Vandiver; Guards, William B. Linn, nominees for Horne; Quarterbacks, Porky Earle, Al Superior Court; Mayor Mackey, Daniels; halfbacks, Sid Trott, John Whitaker, Bill White, Bill Tax, Horace and Bud Traine; fullback, Horace Jeffries, Ed. Hunter and Jack Nichols.

The Ivy Collegians have been organized for the past three seasons and are coached by "Bill" Reynolds, a player known throughout Philadelphia and vicinity as the school-boy wonder. He graduated from West Catholic High School and later starred for three years at Dayton University.

Last season was his first as a "pro" football player, having played with the Clifton Heights eleven.

In the Collegians' line-up will be several boys who recently graduated from the leading high schools of Philadelphia.

The game will begin promptly at three o'clock.

Democratic Candidates At Doylestown Fair

Captain Jack Evans remained buried the second straight day in his effort to reach his mark of seven days and seven nights six feet underground without food and water. Thousands looked down the tube leading to the coffin where Evans, a British war veteran, is buried alive.

The flower show is the most gorgeous in the history of the fair. Both O'Connors was driving east on West street approaching the West street intersection when his car struck the rear end of Mrs. Swartley's car.

Judge Meyers, 26, a veteran of the German Army during the World War, committed suicide by hanging himself from the top of a tall tree in a woods in the rear of the farm of Alfred H. Leedem, near Richboro, on Sunday.

Judging in the various departments started today.

Today is "American Legion Day," with a big military pageant to be staged tonight in front of the grand stand. Drum and bugle corps from Trenton, Germantown, Lansdale, Norristown, Phoenixville, Morrisville, Bristol and Perkasie. The pageant is sponsored by the A. R. Atkinson, Jr., Post, No. 210, of Doylestown. A parade through Doylestown will precede the contest on the fair grounds where $300 in prize money will be awarded.

Meyers worked on the Luff farm.

He has no known relatives in the United States.

BENSALEM TOWNSHIP

The lodges of the I. O. O. F. in the southeastern part of Bucks County will hold their district meeting at Yardley on Wednesday evening. A large attendance is expected due to recent reports.

Mrs. Goodfellow and daughter of New Jersey were visitors at home of Mr. and Mrs. John Cantwell, of Edington, over the weekend.

The regular meeting of the young people of the Eddington Presbyterian Church was held on the evening of the 22nd. Quite a few new members were enrolled.

The luncheon given by the Christ's Church of Eddington, was a great success. Quite a large crowd attended and a good profit was made.

Miss Grace Barth, Bensalem High School graduate and a resident of Street Road, Eddington, is going to school at the University of Pennsylvania. Miss Barth is learning to be a teacher.
